A graphic designer creates visual two-dimensional solutions to communicate messages for their clients. The work is used within a range of media and includes advertising campaigns, book covers, magazines, posters and websites. Graphic designers work to a client brief from which they develop creative ideas.	User interface (UI) design is all about transferring a product's development, research, content and layout into an attractive and responsive experience for the user. Good UI guides the user through a product's interface intuitively and effortlessly. The UI role is crucial to website or app and is a key factor in whether customers trust the brand or not.	Architects work in the construction industry, constructing new buildings and restoring old ones. They are involved in projects from start to finish. Being an architect is about finding out exactly what the client is looking for, whilst working to their budget.
